

Inspiring the Future Aotearoa

Inspiring the Future is a nationwide initiative by the Tertiary Education Commission designed to introduce rangatahi to diverse career opportunities, challenge job stereotypes, and expand their understanding of what's possible.

This event offers a simple yet impactful way for businesses to engage with young people and build connections with local schools. Held in-house, the event brings together six or more industry representatives, where students participate in an interactive "20 Questions" game to guess each role model's profession. Once revealed, role models share their career journeys, discuss pathways into their industry, and offer valuable advice for students navigating their future.

This is a fantastic opportunity for young graduates, apprentices, and professionals to inspire the next generation by sharing their experiences. By getting involved, your business can help shape perceptions, spark ambition, and directly contribute to developing South Canterbury's future workforce.

Why Get Involved?

- Make an impact – Help young people explore career paths they may never have considered.
- Engage with future talent – Strengthen your company's presence among the next generation of workers.
- Give back to the community – Inspire and support rangatahi in their career decision-making.

Join us in shaping the future—get your team involved today! More information on this programme can be found online at www.inspiringthefuture.org.nz
